 Email: hers@adhdcentreforwomen.com
 Website for telemedicine consultation: <https://adultadhd.doxy.me/adhd1>

The ADHD Centre for Women has offered to communicate using email messages and telemedicine/videoconference consultations.

PATIENT ACKNOWLEDGMENT AND AGREEMENT:

I acknowledge that I have read and fully understand the risks, limitations, conditions of use, and instructions for using email messages and telemedicine consultations. I understand and accept the risks outlined below, associated with the use of email messages and telemedicine consultations with the ADHD Centre for Women. I consent to the conditions and will follow the instructions outlined below, as well as any other conditions that the ADHD Centre for Women may impose on communications with patients using email messages and telemedicine consultations.

I acknowledge and understand that despite recommendations that encryption software be used as a security mechanism for electronic communications, it is possible that communications with the ADHD Centre for Women using email messages and telemedicine consultations may not always be encrypted. Despite this, I agree to communicate with the ADHD Centre for Women using these email messages and telemedicine consultations with a full understanding of the risk.

I acknowledge that either I or the ADHD Centre for Women may, at any time, withdraw the option of communicating electronically through email messages and telemedicine consultations upon providing written notice. Any questions I had have been answered.

Risks of using electronic communication:

The ADHD Centre for Women will use reasonable means to protect the security and confidentiality of information sent and received using email messages and telemedicine consultations. However, because of the risks outlined below, the ADHD Centre for Women cannot guarantee the security and confidentiality of electronic communications:

- Use of electronic communications to discuss sensitive information can increase the risk of such information being disclosed to third parties.
- Despite reasonable efforts to protect the privacy and security of electronic communication, it is not possible to completely secure the information.
- Employers and online services may have a legal right to inspect and keep electronic communications that pass through their system.
- Electronic communications can introduce malware into a computer system, and potentially damage or disrupt the computer, networks, and security settings.
- Electronic communications can be forwarded, intercepted, circulated, stored, or even changed without the knowledge or permission of the ADHD Centre for Women or the patient.
- Even after the sender and recipient have deleted copies of electronic communications, back-up copies may exist on a computer system.
- Electronic communications may be disclosed in accordance with a duty to report or a court order.
- Videoconferencing using ADHD Centre for Women meets the security requirements for such communication but there is always a risk of interception/hacking.

If the email or text is used as an e-communication tool, the following are additional risks:

- Emails can more easily be misdirected, resulting in increased risk of being received by unintended and unknown recipients.
- Email can be easier to falsify than handwritten or signed hard copies. It is not feasible to verify the true identity of the sender, or to ensure that only the recipient can read the message once it has been sent.

Conditions of using the Services:

- While the ADHD Centre for Women will attempt to review and respond in a timely fashion to your emails, the ADHD Centre for Women cannot guarantee that all emails will be reviewed and responded to within any specific period of time. Email messages will not be used for medical emergencies or other time-sensitive matters.
- If your electronic communication requires or invites a response from the ADHD Centre for Women and you have not received a response within a reasonable time period, it is your responsibility to follow up to determine whether the intended recipient received the electronic communication and when the recipient will respond.
- Electronic communication is not an appropriate substitute for an in-person urgent assessment. If you have an urgent health concern, you will attend your family physician/nurse practitioner or the Emergency Department. You are responsible for following up on the ADHD Centre for Women's electronic communication and for scheduling appointments where warranted.
- Electronic communications concerning diagnosis or treatment may be printed or transcribed in full and made part of your medical record. Other individuals authorized to access the medical record, such as ADHD Centre for Women staff, may have access to those communications.
- The Physician/Nurse Practitioner may forward electronic communications to staff and those involved in the delivery and administration of your care. The Physician/Nurse Practitioner might use email to communicate with those involved in your care. The ADHD Centre for Women will not forward electronic communications to third parties, including family members, without your prior consent, except as authorized or required by law.
- You agree to inform the ADHD Centre for Women of any types of information you do not want sent via email.

Instructions for communication using the Services:

- To communicate using email, you must reasonably limit or avoid using an employer's or other third party's computer and also inform the ADHD Centre for Women of any changes in the patient's email address to communicate via email.
- Include in the message's subject line an appropriate description of the nature of the email and your full name in the body of the message.
- Review all email communications to ensure they are clear and that all relevant information is provided before sending to the ADHD Centre for Women.
- Take precautions to preserve the confidentiality of electronic communications, such as using screen savers and safeguarding computer passwords.
- Withdraw consent only by email or written communication to the ADHD Centre for Women.

AI Support:

- We may use secure AI tools to assist in drafting your assessment report. Your information is handled in accordance with our privacy policies, and all reports are reviewed, and finalized by a qualified clinician.

If you require immediate assistance, or if your condition appears serious or rapidly worsens, you should not rely on an email message to the ADHD Centre for Women.

- Rather, you should call your family physician/nurse practitioner or go to the nearest Emergency Department or urgent care clinic.
